Trumbay, August 27-6 P. M. There is merely a brokers' market to chronicle on the Stock Exchange, and the daily factuations are unim-portant. The duluess is becoming monotoneus; but the olders of stocks show so impatience to relieve themselves of their load, believing that time, which works sonders, will ultimately bring about a change for their sonest. They have no difficulty in carrying their stocks, eing practically as easy as it has been at any mer, and they have the satisfaction of seeing the earnings of the railways which their securecent rapidly increasing, and this augmentalikely to become more and more marked from week during the remainder of the year, and ough the greater part of the ensuing spring. Each carnings, they reasonably maintain, cannot be rtionately to the real value of the stocks. A brisk for a rise based upon this altered state but prices will just as certainly be knocked down atreme to another, regardless of real values. It will nake the appreciation of values a pretext for a bull ion, but when the opportunity arrives for a bear proment it will have nothing further to say on the subject; prices, in its opinion, will then simply be too high. It is noticeable that a less boarish feeling provails now than was apparent a week ago, and that the eneral tendency of speculation favors a rise.

Owing to the duiness of business in Wall street is again something of a drug. The leading alers in government securities have more money than they can use offered to them at three per cent by private nders, and the banks are willing to lend on this class of collaterals at four per cent, and on railway and mismeous stocks at five. The drain westward is very triding just now, and this, together with the fact that the Sub-freasury is disbursing in redemption of August sompound interest notes presented but not paid last week, is likely to materially influence the next bank statement. There is a reduced supply of commercial offering for discount, and the best grade esent indication that money will be otherwise than asy for a month or six weeks at least to come, and wind at or below the legal rate of interest. If money ided 6 a 7 per cent in Wall street foreign capital sould be sent here in large amounts. It being difficult to sent in England, and nearly all over the Continent, also, Moreover, the Eastern cities are still glutted with money. n journal of yesterday says in relation to local nonetary affairs:-"The supply of idle currency frequently alluded to of late has not been absorbed either legitimate business or speculation," and until it is aborbed it will be available for use in this market.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Before Commissioner Osborne, who is charged with having falsely aworn, in a petition in bankrupicy, that a certain house in Sixteenth street had been conveyed to her by one Elizabeth Morey, was called on yesterday morning, at ten o'clock. At that hour intimation was made to Commissioner Osborne that Mr. Edwin James, counsel for the defendent, was indispesed, and could not attend. The Commissioner a condingly adjourned the further examination of the matter till Thursday.

Charge of Abstracting from the Post Office a Letter Containing a Check for $1.200.

Alfred Rowland, a voung man about twenty years of are, was charged with taking a letter from the Post Office of this city and embezzing its contents—a check for $1,200. The check had been sent from Washington to the Rev. P. J. O'Toole. The boy found the letter In the Post Office box of Mr. Gildermaster, in whose employment be was. He did not return it, but appropriated the letter and the check, as smade. The check was made payable to the order of Mr. O'Toole; but the defendant, as it appeared by the evidence produced against him, sent the check by letter to the makers, in Washnicton, requesting that they would make it mayable to bearer, as he was not known at the bank, and wanted to get the money. This letter was signed with Rev. Mr. O'Toole's name. The senders of the check, on receipt of this communication, knew that the writing was a forgery. They therefore returned the check to the Post Office authorities of New York, with a request that the matter should at once be placed under investigation. Mr. Gaylor, special agent of the department, took the affair in hand, and after inquiry ascertained that the letter had been by mis-rake but into Mr. Gildermaster's box, which is just beside that of Mr. O'Toole, The letter sent to Washington, asking that the mode of paying the check should be changed, was proved to be in the bandwriting of the accused. On this statement of facts the arrest was made, and on yesterday the accused was taken before Commissioner Osborn, who committed him for trial. The case was conducted by Mr. Joseph Bell on the part of the government. in the Post Office box of Mr. Gildermaster, in whose em-

SUPERIOR COURT -- CHAMBERS.

The Exclusion of the Public from Supplementary Examinations—Judge Bachour's Opinion.

In re the Supplement ry Examination of Michael Nort n

a Judgment Deblor .-- A motion was made in this case yes. terday for an adjournment of the examination of Aiderman Norton, the case in which the law reporters of the city press were excluded from attendance on Friday last. On Saturday a meeting of persons (supposed reporters) was held and resolutions adopted decouncing Judge Barbour for issuing the order of exclusion, threatening imnesschment, &c. The regular law reporters of all the daily journals yesterday published a disavowal of the sentiments expressed by the other parties. Before granting the motion of vesterday, therefore, Judge Parbour read a lengthy opinion, which he had prepared as a response to the maionitents, in which he took the ground that, though the first section of the statute declares that "the sittings of every curre within this State shall be public and every cluzen may freely attend the same," proceedings before a judge at chambers are not in any legal sense proceedings to court. (Miler vs. Resuman, 13 Bow., 10; Billing vs. Vanderburg, 17 Ib., 80; for re Bookboot, 21 Barb, 348.) The application of the principle of the statute in question to proceedings before a judge at chambers, he says, would in many cases be exceedingly inconvenient, if not impract cable; for, in practice, very much of that class of business is transacted at the private residences of the judges. A large portion of a judge's chamber business is also of such a nature that its immediate publication would be highly improper—such, for instance, as the hearing and granting of applications for orders of arrest, attachment, &c. In the present case it was upon the application of counsel that the order of exclusion was granted; and in cases where objection is made to the attendance of the public and publication in newspapers it was, he held, the duty of the judge to consider whether away attendance or publication might be productive of injury to the person about to be examined, or other parties, without any corresponding besent to the creation of the public; and it seemed clear that he ought, in the reasonable exercise of a sound discretion, to other parties, without any corresponding besent to the creation of the public attention would not be improper. He was convinced that as a judge, after porters) was held and resolutions adopted denouncing Judge Barbour for issuing the order of exclusion, threat-

[Note.—The latter part of this opinion was written under the belief that all the reporters of the press in the city had held a meeting and adopted certain resolutions condemnatory of my action in the premises; since which I have been gratified by the information that none of the regular court reporters of the principal papers were present at such meeting or participated in its proceedings, but, on the contrary, disapprove of the same.]

A motion was then made to set aside the order of exclusion, and was desied, and the court stated that it could be considered that the opinion was rendered on that motion to enable it to go to the General Term, where it will probably be appealed.

The Express Companies' Imbroglio-Motion for a Receiver. Before Judge Barnard.

Stephen P. Waterbury vs. Elmore P. Rom et al. - This case came up again yesterday on the motion for the appointment of a receiver of the Merchants' Union Ex-press Company and the dissolution of the organization. The attention of the court was wholly occupied The attention of the court was wholly occupied by the reading of the moving papers, which are intonded to prove the allegations of the complaint, which has been already published in full in the Haratto, the charges made in these affldavits were to the effect that the company was organized and mana ed by inexperienced men; that the express business of the country was not so extensive that it could pay two lines to run over the same routes; that the defendants had piedged themselves to call for ten per cent only of the stock, whereas plaintiff had already paid in twenty-five, and that a demand for ten per cent more bad been made; that the company had engaged men at exorbitant sharries who had formerly been employed by the American. Adams and other express companies at moderate rates, &c. The case will be resumed this morning.

THE ROSLYN HOMICIDE.

The Coroner's Inquest-Examination of the Wounded Man and Other Witnesses-The Murderer Still at Large. The inquest upon the body of William O'Brien, who was murdered in an affray which occurred on Sunday night, and the particulars of which appeared in yester. day's Henato, took place on Monday at Roslyn, before Coroner Leonard A. Seaman and a jury. The report that the alleged murderer, Edward Coughlin, had been arrested was unfounded, but measures have been taken which it is believed will shortly place him within the reach of justice. The funeral of the victim, O'Brien, look place yesterday, and was estended by a large number of his friends. Reardon, who was wounded, is expected to recover. Both of the injured men were unmarried, but the alleged murderer has a wife and one child. The following witnesses were examined:-

Michael Reardon, being sworn, said-I live in Roslyn and am a farm laborer, and work for Charles Oakley; I, in company with Morris Gorman, William O'Brien and Michael O'Neil and John Reardon, and perhaps others, walked out and met Edward Coughlin; he was standing by the tree to front of O'Neil's bouse; we had some civil words, and perhaps after that we had some saucy words; then we went to take Coughlin home; Morris walked with me to take Coughin home; coa's know anything of where O'Brien, the deceased, was then; the first I saw of O'Brien was near where Coughin home; how the lives. I think, in Mr. Bryant's house; it was near the lane going up to the turnpike where we were; thichaed U Neil tried to take Coughin home; Moral Gorman also tried to take Coughin; home; we had not been drinking last Sunday during the day, but to the evening we drank something; it was a good while after we got in Rosiyn that I was cut; I got in Rosiyn about dusk; while we were together with Coughin, Coughin cut me; ean't tell what I was cut; I got in Rosiyn about dusk; while we were together with Coughin; Coughin cut me; ean't tell what he cut me with; after O'Brien got cut, I got cut; after I was cut, I turned around, and I eaw O'Brien falling; I took hold of O'Brien and heiped pick him up, and saw that he was dying; O'Brien died in a very short time after he was cut; I did not know Coughlin had a knife; Coughin had travelled the road previously, and I was told he was taquiring for me; I west out of the house and saw nothing of him, and came in; the next time I went to the deer; after that I found him by the tree; it was when I and Korra Gorman tried to get him house; Coughlin said he had enough to kill half walked with me to take Coughlin home; cou't know
